

Back Your Decisions

Stories

Stories are relatable and focus on the customer instead of focusing on the work of someone else. They change the frame to help your team be creative.

Business Goals

Understand how your work impacts the business. And just like any interaction, use the BIAS framework and empathy to understand what stakeholders really want.

Vocabulary

It's harder to have strong "opinions" when you use psychological principles to present new alternative solutions.

3 Steps To Answer Feedback

1 Lead with a yes

Value that they took the time to formulate feedback.

2 Repeat and empathize

Rephrase what was said. Ask questions to deepen the thought.

3 Reassure

Assure them that you also want to find the best solutions before responding.

Meeting Review Preparation

Transform "Likes" Into "Works"

When someone says, "I don't like this" instead of arguing, try to dig deeper to see what works and what doesn't work. It's the best way to stir the conversation away from opinions.

Create Feedback Guardrails

Don't show designs without specifically asking what you want feedback on. It's the best way to focus the conversation and make team decisions quickly.
